WELCOME TO METRO.US!

LENYON WHITAKER, MULTIMEDIA EDITOR

Good morning! Chelsea Clinton wants you and everyone else to leave Barron Trump alone. She recently defended Donald Trump's youngest son Barron in a tweet after the conservative news site Daily Caller published an article bashing the 11-year-old's fashion choices. Find out what she said at metro.us/news.

US PUTS MORE PRESSURE ON PAKISTAN TO HELP

The U.S. put more pressure on Pakistan to help it with the war in Afghanistan, suggesting it could downgrade Islamabad's status as a major non-NATO ally if it does not crack down on Islamist militants. A day after President Donald Trump singled out Pakistan for harboring Afghan Taliban insurgents and other militants, U.S. Secretary of State Rex Tillerson said Washington's relationship with Pakistan would depend on its help against terrorism. "We are going to be conditioning our support for Pakistan and our relationship with them on them delivering results in this area," Tillerson told reporters. U.S. officials are frustrated by what they term Pakistan's unwillingness to act against groups such as the Afghan Taliban and the Haqqani network. Pakistan denies that it harbors militants fighting the U.S. and Afghan government.

CELTICS LAND ALL-STAR KYRIE IRVING FROM CAVS

The Cleveland Cavaliers and Boston Celtics have agreed on a trade deal that would send Kyrie Irving to Boston for Isaiah Thomas, Jae Crowder, Ante Zizic and the Brooklyn Nets' unprotected 2018 first-round pick, reported ESPN's Jeff Goodman. Boston was the East's top seed last season. Cleveland, the No. 2 seed, ended the Celtics' season by defeating them in five games in the Eastern Conference Finals.

BODY REMAINS FOUND IN HULL OF US DESTROYER

4 Divers found some human remains inside sections of a U.S. guided-missile destroyer that collided with a merchant vessel near Singapore. The USS John S. McCain and the tanker Alnic MC collided on Monday while the U.S. ship was approaching Singapore on a routine port call. The impact tore a hole in the warship's port side at the waterline, flooding compartments that included a crew sleeping area. U.S. Pacific Fleet Commander Admiral Scott Swift said an international search-and-rescue operation had found some remains and that the wider search for 10 sailors missing from the accident would continue until all hope was exhausted. "The divers were able to locate some remains in those sealed compartments during their search," Swift told reporters at Singapore's Changi Naval Base.

BARCELONA TERROR CELL PLANNED BIGGER ATTACK

5 An alleged member of an Islamist cell suspected of carrying out last week's Barcelona van attack told a Spanish court that the group had been planning a bigger strike using explosives. The testimony to a closed hearing at Spain's High Court came from Mohamed Houli Chemlal, one of four detained suspects brought to Madrid to testify for the first time in court about the plot. Two of the suspects told the court that Abdelbaki Es Satty, the imam in the small town in northeastern Spain where many of the group came from, was the instigator, the source said, adding that the public prosecutor had asked the judge to send all four to jail while investigations continued. El Mundo newspaper said Chemlal told the court that the group planned to attack architect Antoni Gaudi's landmark Sagrada Familia church and other monuments but this could not be confirmed.

Kids can code the Root robot to write, erase and follow a path around a whiteboard. PROVIDED BY WYSS INSTITUTE AT HARVARD UNIVERSITY

Robot developed at Harvard will help kids learn to code

Root, a robot developed at Harvard, can help everyone from kids to adults gain coding skills.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Want your kid to get into coding? There will soon be a new wall-climbing robot on the market, developed at Harvard University, to help you do just that.

Root is an educational robot developed by faculty at Harvard's Wyss Institute for Biologically Inspired Engineering. Three Wyss employees recently started Root Robotics, a startup company that is commercializing Root to bring the robot to the masses.

"Our mission is to make coding accessible for any age, any background and any experience [level]," said Zee Dubrovsky, co-founder and CEO of Root Robotics and former engineering staff lead at the Wyss Institute. "Ultimately, we think that robots are the best way to engage in that journey."

So how does Root work? The compact robot can be programmed and operated from an iPad to complete an array of tasks, like driving on vertical surfaces, drawing, erasing, playing music, and sensing and responding to its surroundings.

But what makes Root unique, Dubrovsky said, is how it becomes more sophisticated as its user grows their coding skills. Many STEM toys are about variety — from coding to 3-D printing to assembling a circuit — but not about educational depth, he said.

"Were creating this gigantic pathway from a 4-year-old's first experience with a robot and learning to code and thinking, 'Hey, I can do this,' to now college students in [Harvard professor Radhika Nagpal]'s classroom doing things with that same robot," he said.

You read that right: A Harvard class is actually using Root to teach undergrads coding — the same robot that will soon be marketed to parents who want to see their little ones gaining tech skills.

That's because there are three levels to Root's programming system, bringing you from a beginner to someone writing full text codes in real, career-based coding languages like Python and JavaScript.

Dubrovsky's own daughter, at only 10 years old, coded Root to write her name. She brought it into show-and-tell at her school and had Root write on her classroom's whiteboard.

"It was one of those drop-the-mic moments," he said. "That was something special that Root gave her."

To Dubrovsky, the ability to program a robot like that will be a necessary skill in the future.

"Learning and understanding how digital things actually work is going to be currency of the world," he said. "My dream is that root is going to be this generation's reason of falling in love with coding."

Root Robotics raised $2.5 million in seed funding from investors and secured the worldwide license needed to manufacture Root. The robot will be priced at $199 and is currently being factory manufactured; Dubrovsky expects mass production to hit the market in March.

"Our mission is to make coding accessible for any age, any background and any experience [level]."

Katy Perry plays coy

Katy Perry is playing coy about the recent rumors that she and ex-boyfriend Orlando Bloom are back on. If she could just go away for a tiny bit and give us all a break, I would like that very much.

During an interview on SiriusXM's "The Morning Mashup" earlier this week, the singer addressed said rumors, saying "Well, you know, I think people are in and out of your life. It's nice to keep people you love around you," Perry, explained. "When you get older, lines get blurred. And you know what? I'm really busy. I'm about to go on tour for another year."

So, yeah. Not really sure what she's trying to say here. Is she doing this thing? Is she not? Is there just a swirl of melted cotton candy where her frontal lobe should be? Because, that's like, kind of her thing? So many questions, so few answers.

Anyway, this is all because Perry and Bloom were spotted getting cozy at an Ed Sheeran concert a couple of weeks ago. Of course they were. Because nothing is more romantic than those Ed Sheeran songs you hear in the grocery store.

Miles Teller is engaged

In case you're interested.

Miles Teller — a man once praised by Esquire for kind of being a dick — put a ring on it. That's right: the "Fantastic Four" actor is engaged to longtime girlfriend Keleigh Sperry. Cool, I guess!

Teller reportedly proposed on a safari in Africa, which, why? The couple, who have been dating since 2013, waited to announce their news so as not to upstage Sperry's sister, who got married in July. How very nice of them.

Teller is usually in the news for some tomfoolery, so this is a nice change of pace. Well, at least it's better than the last time we talked about him — when he partied hard and got arrested for said partying. For a moment, he was just like any other normal, getting garbaged in San Diego and then getting arrested for public intoxication. You know, as you do.

Anyway, congratulations, I guess!

Mariah Carey too has low self-esteem

If Mariah Carey has low-self esteem, what hope is there for the rest of us?

In an interview with Page Six, the pop diva admits that she suffers from "low self-esteem," but I for one am not convinced that she knows that those words mean, especially when used together. "I just feel like I am a regular human being and I deserve the same respect as anybody else," she said.

Which, she knows she's lying, right? Like, sure, she's a human being. But she knows that we know that she thinks she's better than human, right? She's a dang diva. And that's fine!

"I have always had low self-esteem," she continues. "And people do not recognize that … I can't measure what type of respect I deserve — I really can't."

Is Mariah trying a new look on? Like, a humble one? Because, do not want. Imagining a world where Carey has low-self esteem is not a world I want to live in, no thank you.

But yeah: The diva to end all divas is trying on humility for size. And babygirl, I have to tell you: it's not a great fit. You're better than humble, babe. You're Mariah.

Whatever you say, honey.

Griffin Newman: Trump just needs the Lasso of Truth

Newman and Peter Serafinowicz — stars of "The Tick" — nerd out about comics, comedy and of course, dumping on Trump.

RACHAEL VAUGHAN CLEMMONS
rachael.clemmons@metro.us

Sitting down with Griffin Newman and Peter Serafinowicz, who play the slightly unhinged heroes of Amazon's "The Tick," we notice right away that the mismatched pair mirror their characters. Newman shuffles in first, his hands clenched inside of his sweater. Serafinowicz follows — a gentle giant with a soft British accent. "Cool glasses, by the way," he says — and man, does this dude believe in eye contact. "Do they do a monocle in those?"

What was supposed to be a quick round of lightning questions turns into something that's less an interview and more watching Newman — who plays the nebbish sidekick-turned-hero Arthur Everest, and Serafinowicz, the Tick himself — have their own conversation. Here, we talk comics, sketch comedy and how to undo Trump's misdeeds.

"The Tick" is the first time either of you have played a superhero. Who are some of your favorites?
Griffin Newman: My boring answer is Spider-Man. He just so archetypically represents everything that I love: the outsider as superhero. Someone who has all this power, but never feels high status and is so defined by their choice to do the right thing rather than being innately heroic. It's an act of decision on a daily basis.

Can't get enough of these two. JESSICA MIGLIO/AMAZON PRIME VIDEO

What's your favorite comedy on TV right now?
GN: "Fleabag" is my favorite thing I've seen in the last year. You can't describe that show to anyone and make it sound like anything you haven't seen a thousand times. It's just how well executed it is, and how specific the character is.

PS: I love "Better Call Saul," which is less of an out-and-out comedy. But it has two of my all time favorite comedians, Michael McKean and Bob Odenkirk. They're just f—king amazing actors.

What superpower do you think we need to take down the current administration?
GN: We have this conversation every day on set — what is it going to take that would actually do this guy in?

PS: In all honesty, there must be spies ready to assassinate him. This is the way the world works, isn't it?

GN: It would be the most cathartically satisfying thing if you could get him under Wonder Woman's Lasso of Truth. Get him tied up for just 30 minutes and get him to just admit he doesn't care about anyone. I think he's physically incapable of telling the truth without a lasso.

PS: What I would do is get Superman to kiss him passionately for a long time. Like 10 minutes. And he would forget everything that he learned since he was a baby. But if Trump had the mental faculties of a baby, of a one-day-old baby, he would still thrive in the f—king White House.

The online store where everything costs $3

Brandless.com offers discounts — no catch.

SUNNY MONTEFIORE
letters@metro.us

For once, the internet isn't obsessing out over a crazy epic online Cyber Monday deal. Or crazy-good Amazon Prime day deal. In fact, the collective interwebz is not even freaking out over an amazing hotel sale. This time, it's about your ability to buy groceries, beauty products and home and office goods online. Yes, really.

The day has come to rejoice over Brandless. What is Brandless, you ask? This fabulous online megagrocer sells everything for a measly $3. No gimmicks. No weird scams. No hassle of, you know, going to the store and shopping in person.

At Brandless, shoppers can peruse and purchase everything from organic sweet-potato tortilla chips ($3) and toasted coconut cooking thins ($3) to white-cheddar-flavored quinoa puffs ($3) and organic fair trade medium roast ground coffee (you know how much it costs).

Beyond the food aisle, there's a heck lot more to explore. For household joy, try their multi-surface cleaner (we don't need to tell you how much things at Brandless cost anymore, now do we?) or eucalyptus and lavender gel hand soap.

In the beauty department, there's daily facial moisturizer, organic cotton balls and more. For your home, try a pizza cutter, vegetable peeler, or serrated bread knife. Why not tack on a can opener to replace your vintage, ahem, rusting old one from your parents? For $3, you really don't have much to lose.

According to PureWow, there's a reason it's so cheap. "[It's something Brandless] calls BrandTax, or the hidden costs you pay for a national brand. The thinking is that we've been trained to believe these costs increase quality, but they rarely do. By taking the brand name out of the equation, Brandless strives to sell the same quality goods for a fraction of the cost."

Whatever the reason, we're more than a little stoked for our new craft paper hard cover bound notebook. This $3 Brandless delight will be an easy place to jot down our next shopping list for the brilliant site.

Brandless is the discount go-to forhomeand office supplies, beauty products and groceries, all for $3.

STANTON TO THE SOX?

Despite their relative scoring outburst this month, the Red Sox could do much better in the power categories as they are still dead last in the AL in home runs.

That, combined with the fact that the Sox continue to be a top three MLB franchise in payroll year after year, is why Boston is an obvious landing spot in a trade for Marlins slugger Giancarlo Stanton. Stanton leads MLB in home runs by an 8 HR margin as he currently has 45 dingers.

The hold-up will obviously be the money, but should we really act like the Red Sox can't handle this type of deal?

The Dodgers began the season with a payroll of $242 million. The Red Sox had the third highest Opening Day payroll in the Majors at $199 million. The Dodgers then went ahead and added another big contract at the trade deadline in Yu Darvish.

The wild spending paid off for the Dodgers, as they currently have an MLB-best 88 wins.

Don't cry poor for John Henry and company.

NIX THE NUDE PICS

Life is not fair, and in life in 2017 if you're a celebrity and you have nude pics of yourself and your significant other on your phone then you're going to be hacked.

Skier Lindsey Vonn had her phone hacked and nude pics of herself and ex-boyfriend Tiger Woods wound up on the website Celeb Jihad.

"It is an outrageous and despicable invasion of privacy for anyone to steal and illegally publish private intimate photos," a representative of Vonn told The Big Lead. "Lindsey will take all necessary and appropriate legal action to protect and enforce her rights and interests."

Hear, hear. But again — this is 2017. She hasn't dated Woods in over two years — which means she's had these pics on her phone for a while now.

Tiger is pissed about it too, obviously, vowing that he'll sue the people who published the photos.

Aries Emotions will be difficult to control. Look for the positive in any situation you face. A challenge should be met with intelligent action, not with brute force.

Taurus Patience will be required when dealing with peers. Joint ventures could turn out to be a nightmare if you and your partner(s) cannot agree on responsibilties.

Gemini Consider the information you have been given and what is pertinent to the situation you face with a partner or someone asking too much of you, and do what's necessary.

Cancer Look for an innovative way to make your home and surroundings more comfortable. A discussion with a friend or relative will motivate you to make a personal adjustment.

Leo Channel your energy into something that will make you happy, give you more time or provide an improved space to pursue your dreams. Discipline will lead to progress.

Virgo Pour your heart and soul into the things you enjoy doing most. Surround yourself with good, hard-working, honest people and aim to reach your goals.

Libra Take better care of your health and protect your reputation. Don't feel the need to make an impulsive change to your lifestyle because someone is pressuring you.

Scorpio Use your charm and sensitivity to win favors and make unique contributions to a cause or effort. Romance is highlighted, but possessiveness must be curbed.

Sagittarius Confusion will take the reins if you are gullible. Question anything that appears sketchy. If you feel you need space, visit a place that offers tranquility.

Capricorn A business meeting will be informative. Share your concerns and offer suggestions that will make what's being offered more enticing. Don't go over budget.

Aquarius Before you commit your time or money to help someone, consider if it will hinder you from taking care of personal responsibilities. Offer good advice.

Pisces Share necessary information, but not your opinions or secrets. A thoughtful gesture will improve a relationship with someone you care about. EUGENIA LAST
